ACT Today Autism Care and Treatment Changes Name to Autism Care Today

Thousand Oaks, Calif. (October 17, 2018)—ACT Today Autism Care and Treatment, one of the only nonprofits that serves families directly with product and treatment services – announced today that it has changed its name to Autism Care Today. The name reflects the nonprofit's broader commitment to providing immediate services for families impacted by autism.

"Our organization receives more than 1,500 grant applications per year from families where the average household income is $30,000 per year," says Nancy Alspaugh-Jackson, executive director, Autism Care Today (formerly Autism Care and Treatment Today!). "Our new name provides greater awareness for more families to identify our services for the autism community."

Since the inception of the organization in 2005, Autism Care Today has raised and distributed over $1.75 million in grants that pay for behavioral therapy, medical care, special education schools and other services.

While most Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) nonprofits provide only awareness and research, both very important services for the cause, families can apply for a grant from Autism Care Today for funding assistance through a wide range of unique product and treatment services including the following: vitamins / supplements; speech, occupational, equine and music therapy; sensory equipment; special GFCF (gluten-free, casein-free) diet; assistive technology (iPads and communication software); GPS tracking devices; intensive behavioral therapy; special needs summer camp; Applied Behavioral Analysis (ABA) therapy, medical insurance co-pays and out-of-pocket expenses; special safety fences; social skills tuition; augmentative communication devices; and autism assistance dogs.

About Autism Care Today
